TO DENNIS.

O, Dennis! come back to the sand lots again, Where Erin's green banner is flying; There's a tear in the corner of Patrick's blue eye,
And Bridget to see you is dying.
Why stay where the codfish and mackerel smell
Police every breath of free air, And white-livered, pumpkin-fed puritan men—
The blue-bellied Yankee—are everywhere.
The fleas on the sand hills grow daily more lean,
And the wharf-rats are hungry and chill, And only Mark Hopkins was frightened to death
Of the autocrats upon Nob Hill;
The Chinamen work on the railroad yet,
And peddle from door to door,
And sleep in their stables and basements sound
As ever they did of yore.

Let Benjamin wade in the river of blood That Boston sends into the bay, But Dennis, dear Dennis, for fear you get hurt,
You'd better come home right away;
Carolina once started a river of blood, And drowned herself in the red pool;
New England don't scare at your bullying talk—
Don't make yourself, Dennis, a fool.

The trade breeze blow o'er the sand hills yet, Enticing our beautiful bay, And our sunshine of autumn is brighter than in their song-renewed month of May;
But there is a void in each Irishman's heart That Wellock can never more fill, Our Moses is missing—and Luther and yen-We roam in the wilderness still.

We cannot sing Ireland's sweet song to-day, The "Karin Go Brann" of yore, Our bag-pipes are lying on the sand lot fence, Nor attempt "Horry O'More," Our shambles are piled on the barren sand Awaiting the "sweet bye and bye"; Come back to us, Dennis, thou oath of a boy,
Come back to us—or we die.

THE MINING STOCK SWINDLE.

From the San Francisco Chronicle, Nov. 22d.
The latest news from the spotted bonanza indicates a decided turning down from the rose-colored "expert" reports recently circulated so freely, to plain statements of facts, which makes the new prospect look like the ordinary Comstock ore—disagreeably mixed with porphyry, and very much like some of the strikes in Ophir, which have set so many people crazy.
The experts having so badly overdone their work have been reared for the present and new blood has been called into service—miners, a millionaire and a United States Senator.
Instead of a bonanza of fabulous richness beginning a little below the 2000-foot level their appears to be nothing on or above the 2100-foot level that will pay for extracting—not even milling ore. The miners found some good ore on the lower level, but nothing above but "caprock" and low-grade ore. Mr Mac-Kay ignores all above the 2200-foot level entirely and expresses the opinion that the "indications" on the 2200-foot level are favorable, though six months will be needed to explore the mine. Senator Jones enthusiastically declares the mine "was never looking better," but he does not say whether it is looking as well as Savage did in 1872, when he was superintendent, and the stock being $700 per share in the market, his telegrams bankrupted so many of his friends, who bought while he was selling. Mr. Skae finds it necessary to go deeper, and so has begun to sink the incline to the 2300-foot level. In the mean time the stock fluctuates between $60 and $85 per share, and to give as much importance as possible to the gamble there is plenty of talk about compromises, contests for control, plots and counter-plots.

We have no opinion to express of the market as to whether it will go up or go down. Of one thing, however, we are certain, and that is that the Comstock mines are, always have been and always will be in the control of men who look more to the stock market than to the mines for their profit. There is a possibility that a good body of ore may eventually be found in the Sierra Nevada and Union, but there is no possibility that more than one in a thousand of those who buy the stock, either for dividends or as a gamble, will in the long run obtain a profit. "Milking the street" has become a scientific game, with the chances all in favor of the insider. He levies, collects and disburses assessments at pleasure, finding the business satisfactory to himself if not to the stockholders.
He controls the operations in the mines and utilizes the information thus obtained for his own benefit in stock operations. He has a certain bonanza in the stock market and a possible bonanza in the mine. But the stockholder has only the poor privilege of paying assessments or getting back a part of his investment in dividends after buying his shares at inflated prices.
The recent deal is a forcible illustration of the way this system works.

The manipulators waited quietly until they thought the people had forgotten old scores and were ready for another gamble—until the savings had been accumulated. Then having concentrated the stocks at low prices they set the experts at work with their assays and the brokers at work with their wash sales. The mines began to "look well," and stocks went up with astounding rapidity. This created public excitement and people began to buy. There were rumors of good developments in nearly all the mines. Sales of stocks to the number of millions of shares and hundreds of millions of dollars—almost equal in number and value to all on the list—were recorded. Finally buyers were exhausted and the market fell of its own weight. Then there was an effort to re-inflate it, not on "speculative" developments, but on "fund." It was thought there were enough fools left to pay a few more millions in stock dividends to the manipulators.
And perhaps there were, but they took a sober second thought and declined to be milked. So the insiders who still had stock to sell, knowing there were no dividends in the mines, at least for many months, undertook to sell out to each other. They all happened to be the same way of thinking, and so there was nothing for stocks to do but to go down.
And down they went with a rush, smashing pools, sweeping away margins, destroying homes and making paupers.

RETURNED.

From the San Francisco Democrat (German).
Mr. A. C. Hesing, one of the publishers of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, has just returned here and heartily, although a little sunburnt, from a trip of several weeks through Arizona. Mr. Hesing made it his special object to investigate the mineral resources of Arizona, and his interesting reports and correspondence, which evince his extraordinary and thorough ability of observation, prove conclusively that he has fully accomplished his object. He reports wonders of the mineral wealth of that comparatively unknown Territory, the development of which have hardly been commenced. He brought with him a piece of silver ore from the Julius mine, in the Globe District, which is at present exhibited in the office of the Alta California. It weighs 106 pounds, and is of the estimated value of $7 per pound. Its richness astonished even Californians.
The people of Illinois, however, will hardly appreciate the fact that such a piece of worthless looking stone contains such wealth. We learn that Mr. Hesing intends to make his observations and examinations actually profitable by working several of the mines he has acquired, and we wish him the best and greatest success.
